Richmond Eats: The Local Eating Challenge

Raise awareness and support food security in your community by taking part in the Richmond Eats Local Eating Challenge for one week each year.

Join us as we eat only produce grown in Richmond, meat raised by our farmers, and seafood caught by local fishermen.

This FUNdraising event will further the local food conversation and raise funds for food security in Richmond.

Why Eat Local?

“Eating locally isn’t just a fad like the various diets advertised on late-night TV—it may be one of the most important ways we save ourselves and the planet.”

-Dr. David Suzuki

Eating local is about bringing communities closer to the roots of our food production systems, nourishing not only the belly, but also our relationships with one another and the land that sustains us.

Local food:

•Sustains. Buying local sustains both local livelihoods and our environment. It helps small farms stay on the land, and reduces supply chain carbon emissions.

•Delights. Local produce is packed with nutrition and flavour due to freshness and optimum ripeness. Keep an eye out for seasonal surprises to expand your palate.

•Connects. Farmer’s markets are a fruitful forum for cultivating connections between neighbours, farmers, the land, and seasons.

•Empowers. Community members have the opportunity to influence how our food is produced and distributed.
